The CALL FOR PAPER ABSTRACTS for the 2012 Preserving the Historic Road conference to be hosted in Indianapolis this coming September is now in progress. The deadline for paper abstracts is 12:00 midnight (Pacific Time) January 31, 2012.

Long known as the Crossroads State, Indiana has notable historic roads and scenic byway corridors including the Historic National Road, the Ohio River Scenic Byway, Indiana Historic Pathways, the Lincoln Highway, the Whitewater Canal, the Dixie Highway and the Michigan Road. Founded in 1821, Indianapolis was designed by Alexander Ralston, an apprentice of Pierre Charles L'Enfant. Nicknamed the Circle City, Indianapolis is centered on historic Monument Circle. In the 1900s, as a part of the City Beautiful movement, the noted landscape architect George Kessler created a plan for parklands and boulevards throughout the City. Today, after forty years of progressive planning, Indianapolis is one of the most dynamic and walkable cities in the United States.
